Betsy Betsy

She was born in '32, and was she ever pretty
She rode a freight train west, all the way from Detroit
City
Betsy's seen more places than I'll ever hope to see Betsy's been more loyal than any friend could be

With some she traveled fast, with others it was slow Betsy's seen them all, she'd seen them come and go She must have had some favorites before I finally met her
And now that she's all mine, they'd better just forget
her

Betsy was a lady and that she will remain Betsy took some beatings but she never once complained

She had a classic beauty that everyone could see
I was the last to meet her, but she gave her life to me
She may be rusted iron, but to me she's solid gold
And I just can't hold the tears back 'cause Betsy's growing old
