How many times do we walk away
And say to ourselves some other day
How many times do we say to ourselves if only
If only this, if only that, if only I wasn't just where I'm at
If only she loved me, if it wasn't for him
If only I could start it over again

Empty rooms and vacant tombs
Were never who we wanted to be
And were always pretending we were someone else
Someone who doesn't just hate themselves
But stand up, get up, sit up, jump, jump, all you can do
Is not let the world tear you in two
Forget their opinions cause they don't mean much
Forgive their decisions cause they're just out of touch

Unable to dance, unable to laugh
Unable to throw their arms at the chance
And always taking things seriously
And never being who they wanted to be

When I met you your eyes were like gasoline
So slick and so cold and wanting to please
And maybe it's me that burned you out
That caused you to question and made you feel doubt
But stand up, get up, sit up, jump, jump, all you can do
Is not let the world tear you in two
Forget their opinions cause they don't mean much
Forgive their decisions cause they're just out of touch

Unable to dance, unable to laugh
Unable to throw their arms at the chance
And always taking things seriously
And never being who they wanted to be

Unable to burn the bridges they make
Unable to take a chance and make a change
Unable to learn from the choices they take
Unable to grow from their mistakes

Take a chance to throw it all away!

Unable to dance, unable to laugh
Unable to throw their arms at the chance
And always taking things seriously
And never being who they wanted to be

But stand up, get up, sit up, jump, jump, all you can do-
