(Amie Comeaux/Jim Beauhall)

He may give you diamonds on your birthday
And send you flowers now and then
He may put a new car in your driveway
Take you places you ain't ever been

He'll make you think that you're his one and only
But there's a big surprise in store for you
'Cause that man has an eye for every woman
Except for the one he's married to

You're gonna wish you were still the other woman
You're the one who hears his alibis
And if you think you can keep him home
You got another thing comin'
'Cause there will always be
The other woman

You had best be watchin' every minute
'Cause someday he's gonna cross that line
It's been your game, but I'm about to win it
'Cause now the problems are yours instead of mine

So while you're livin' on all those promises he made you

I'll be havin' all the good times that you'll miss
And the day he don't come home and make love to ya
Is when you'll know he's had enough of wedding bliss

You're gonna wish you were still the other woman
You're the one who hears his alibis
And if you think you can keep him home
You got another thing comin'
'Cause there will always be
The other woman

You're gonna wish you were still the other woman
You're the one who hears his alibis
And if you think you can keep him home
You got another thing comin'

'Cause there will always be
The other woman

And if you think you can keep him home
You got another thing comin'
'Cause there will always be
The other woman
The other woman
