I hear the city waking up, scurrying on the run I wrap my arms around you, I don't want the day to come There's drops of water on the window and the clock says time to roll Kiss your neck, breathe in your hair, I don't wanna rise and go Cause the world out there is cold hard and blue, and I'm still warm with you

The wind hits me between the eyes, I pull my hat down low
I work my way through rain and hail, mud, sleet and slow
It' might not be here with me, but I've tucked you in my heart
And I keep your flame burning there while we're apart Even when I'm alone, it's true, that I'm still warm with you

Tough as nails, sharp as ice, this old cruel world can cut you hard Leave you bitter cold, sad and froze, you can build a fire
But you still need a spark to warm your heart

Thoughts of rivers and a scorching sun and the smell of green grass Longing for those days again with the butterflies blowing past
Maybe I could rescue us, we could set sail for the sun But even this old dead gray world will come back, she ain't done
I'm feeling lost searching for a clue, I'm still warm with you

When I bottom out and lord knows I do Well, I'm still warm with you
