Another day burns away into darkness
Another blink on the eye of time
I am straining through the blackness Ever searching for a sign

Days grow long and the days grow dark and the days
grow ever colder
The trust that I started with fades as I get older Though the road is hard it seems to me there is no way around this
From all you've done for me I know you'll never break your promise

So here at the end of this day where the world is shaded in gray
I will look to the blue horizons and watch for you to come
When my hope is shattered and torn, when my faith is weathered and worn
I'll look to the blue horizons

I am still walking, evading the shadows
I am still running that narrow line I'll go wherever you would have me go
Ever searching for a sign

Days grow long and the days grow dark and the days
grow ever colder
The trust that I started with fades as I get older
Though the road is hard it seems to me there is no way
around this
From all you've done for me I know you'll never break
your promise

So here at the end of this day where the world is
shaded in gray
I will look to the blue horizons and watch for you to come
When my hope is shattered and torn, when my faith is
weathered and worn
I'll look to the blue horizons

Days grow long and the days grow dark and the days
grow ever colder
The trust that I started with fades as I get older
Though the road is hard it seems to me there is no way
around this
From all you've done for me I know you'll never break
your promise

So here at the end of this day where the world is
shaded in gray
I will look to the blue horizons and watch for you to come
When my hope is shattered and torn, when my faith is
weathered and worn
I'll look to the blue horizons
Wherever you say I'll go, go Wherever you say I'll go
I'll look to the blue horizons

Wherever I'll go
