somehow, somehow it carries me without a reason and i dont know why you had your chance and you had your turn you had my hand back then had my everything

you're such a stupid thing, a game no one really wins and you're always raining even when the weather's good, like falling's your passion you've always been there before
if you could feel it you would understand,
if you could feel it you would understand

sometimes becomes too many times without an end but i dont know why i dont have a choise but to forgive and forget you're glass's always half-empty baby, so am i

you're such a stupid thing,
you're always raining even when the weather's good,
if you could feel it you would understand,
if you could feel it you would understand

as if it wasnt enough allready as if you hadnt taken the last piece as if i havent faught it through my mind brings me back to you
