'goodbye' to start a sad song don't feel like the right thing to do but these words, like sea birds fly out and seem to know what to do if i can never hold you again i'll whisper your name on the rain and i'll sail on heaven's seas with you sail's tight, wind's right look back to see the bay bask in blue under orange and gold, the story unfolds you sleep like a starfish alone

the radio shouts "the pirates are out" clocked just off the coast of brazil that night, in twilight you were shot down for gold I could have scooped from my heart
