Never fails
They always go back
Back to what they know
To the scene of the crime

And who would know
If they just cruised by
For one last look
To clear their head

And when men learn
How many shots does it take
To kick yourself down because you're feeling satisfied

Until the sun finally sets in your heart
And it seems like you're too young to die
Isn't that right?

Crazy from
Self-inflicted injuries
And should it kill you
You think you might be better off

Than the struggle
Circles me around and around
Excuses fly
That's all you ever hear

Cause you're lonely
Never had a mind to take
Precautionary
Measures to the head

Until the sun finally sets in your heart
And it seems like you're too young to die
Until the sun finally sets in your heart
And it seems like you're too young to die
Isn't that right?

Until the sun finally sets in your heart
And it seems like you're too young to die

And the sun finally sets in your heart
And it seems like you're too young to die

Isn't that right?
