Out to the west of Lambert's Cove

There is a sail out in the sun

And I'm on board though very small

I've come home to stop yearning

Burn off the haze around the shore

Turn off the crazy way I feel

I'll stay away from you no more

I've come home to stop yearning

Try to make it work out

I'm trying to sand the edges of my soul to fit your soul

I want to make it work out

Cause i can't stand it anymore

You'd think a man would know

You'd think a man would know

I've been, turning through the pages

Looking back on everything I wish i could undo

But my friends all turned to strangers

SO all I really have is you

I'm gonna do sme changing

Try to lead the life I know my life deserves to live

I'm gonna rearrange it

And you'll believe me in the end
You'd think a man would know
You'd think a man would know
Mistakes we all know how it goes
But lessons don't make for apologies
We all need some place from which to grow
But don't you think a man should probably know
Yeah, you'd think a man would know
You make it easy
All in all I fall and fall in love with you again
If you ever leave me, back down from heaven i'll descend
