She's waking up Alone in bed
She smokes a cigarette and bows her pretty head There's no one on the telephone Your voice is always gone
You know she aint sleeping alone

And everyday
And far away
And all the memories
Have got her on her knees
The colors in her head
are turning red
and she's remembering Everything you say
and she's raining down
and she's a million miles from you

You say
You break
I'll draw a picture of my heart so you can tear it back
and she's raining down, she's raining down and you're a million miles away
There's not a day that goes by
When I don't think about
When I don't think about

Waking up
Alone again
She smokes a cigarette
While trying to forget but she can't ignore
This anymore
She sitting on the floor staring at the bedroom door

Another day
She's still awake
Another cigarette
Has burned her fingertips

and she forgets about Everything you say
and she's a million miles from you

She's raining down
and there's not a day that goes by

Now I see it
I can even touch it, feel it
Now you see it
I know you can't believe it
Now I see it

That I don't think about

And she's lying on the floor
She can't take it anymore
She's waiting by the phone Where she always sleeps alone
and she's waiting by the phone Where she always sleeps alone (where she always sleeps alone)
