Sun's turning on the world today
It's hard enough to sit and wait
You're longing, now, to know what
You're longing, now, to understand
But you open up your eyes and spy
You try to catch a lullaby
Leading out to nowhere
You wonder what you'll get there

The grown up's gonna tell you what
As everyone's gonna teach you right
See the dreams got narrowed down
The fallen leaves, the fallen crowns
You wander here, now, until you go
Stay a while, gotta take it slow
They'll give you fears and they'll give you scars
And TV screens meant to fill your nights
But it's too late to gimme a call
And you're stuck out there on your own

The sun awakes in shades of grey
It's time to go, it's time to face
The path you try to figure
The tracks and lies and pictures
And you'll try to get the explanations
You'll harden all your expectations
Targets that you can't stop
On and on, and now what?

The grown up's gonna tell you that
Another one's gonna tell it twice
Now you doubt of the way you are
Now the earth don't feel so far
Won't you come along with myself?
Aren't you going down with myself?
They give you fears and they give you scars
And what the world's gonna tear apart
But it's too late to gimme a call
And you're stuck out there on your own
Saying, will you stay or will you fall, now?...

Saying, will you stay or will you fall, now? (bis)
Now you doubt of the way you are
Another chance, another try
Will you stay or will you fall, now? (bis)
They give you fears and they give you scars
And what the world's gonna tear apart
It's too late to give me a call
