A bird flew out of Lapland
An eagle from the North East
One wing ruffled the water
And the other swept the sky
It's tail skimmed the sea
It flutters, it glides
It looks, it turns round
"Why, man are you in the sea
Fellow, among the billows?"

One wing ruffled the water
And the other swept the sky away
One wing ruffled the water
And the other swept the sky away

One wing ruffled the water
And the other swept the sky away
