"Bygone"

Knelt down, to see through your heart of stone, went back, back to the lonely road.
They're gathering a crowd, with fire in their eyes.
To raise a new religion, while the old one dies.
They're smoking out the ghosts,
someone has to try.
Can they be forgiven,
for they know not why.

And it's easy, when everything is bygone,
so easy now everything is bygone,
all our dreams were tied on,
all that we relied on.

Came back, Came back to where it all began.
Faced facts now that I've become a man.
Seems like nothing much has changed,
though everything has died.
Childhood reminiscence of you by my side.
Picking up the stones, cause someone had to try.
Will we be forgiven? for we knew not why.

And it's easy, when everything is bygone,
so easy now everything is bygone,
all our dreams were tied on,
all that we relied on.

Can't stop the world from spinning,
Can't make it feel right.
Still see the old town burning,
in every twilight.
And you, You gave it all you could,
I always knew you would!

I want a pocket of luck in my life,
fed up with waiting, I need it tonight.

I want a pocket of luck in my life,
fed up with waiting, I need it tonight.

Need it tonight!

Need it tonight!
Need it tonight!
Need it tonight!
