These people whisper behind my back it gets so hard to
See through all of that.
The dust never settles the smoke never clears, a constant
Fog surrounding all my fears.

To face my peers and say,
I have not changed.
Blinded by a mask they all set forth to cast.

Searching the days for something more I need to find a Way to fill this void.
Attached to those that could careless my everyday life
Seems to revolved around it.
Please Christ lift this weight off my shoulders relieve
The tension that comes from within.
Fighting with these inner conflicts my thoughts seem to Always have the upperhand.

To face my peers and say,
I have not changed.
Blinded by a mask they all set forth to cast.

Who is who I ask cause this is who I am.
I am a man so strong, don't tell me those times are gone.
You're all fading in my past I should have known it would Never last.
Farewell to those I know, I'll be fine just with out you.

It has arrived
