Verse 1:

There was a time, my love -- my heart had grown cold
My arms were reaching out for someone to hold
I was all mired in gloom and I was alone
You took a hold of me and made me your own

Verse 2:

I'd forgotten the things I knew inside to be true

Trials were everywhere and pleasures were few
I drifted along in the ocean of life
But then you pulled me, dear, from the waters of strife

Verse 3:

There was dearth in me, there was a lack
I could not see my heart, but feared it was black
