as you sat there with your coffee looking up you told me your life story, how there'd never be enough glue to put you back together or ropes to tie it in and so softly showed the scars how you can begin to light all these lights alone
to wait
wishing you'd come home take a breath
you'll need it where you're going make it up as you go along

when she figures it out she'll be astounded to find that she never even had a chance
she may never get around what it's all about
i just hope that the crash is not too loud.

and they told you that it's cold this far away from home but you sold all you know for a bus ride with no phone now you lay on your back wondering what went wrong all the letters that you sent me, they all went into this song
to me
all your lights are off
to me
honey, you're on top
take a breath

you'll find out someday i know just don't think i'll be here to make sure you make up your mind you've only got to stop

(and i hope i'm not around)
when she figures it out.

you've got to stop.
