A small country chapel
that comes out at night a garden of light
a house by its side
where impossible angles of wood make the halls
the windows and walls
and shadows that crawl

I step through the door find my brothers within silent and grim they usher me in

I'm led to the room where our brother resides suspended inside
by a rope drawn tight

left in his eyes
a fear from his life and I wonder why

oh, outside the home
a shadow is shown
and I think it sees me

oh no
death aglow
black as night
cold as bone
I know
why you die alone
take your life
taint your soul

Then without thinking
a gun's in my hand
pointed at him
the trigger pulled in one well-placed shot to his chest takes him down he's dead on the ground

so I turn around

back through the house
find them all there they've got to see this

but oh, where did he go they all let me know that he'll come again

oh no
death aglow
black as night
cold as bone
I know
oh no
look out below
here I come like a stone oh no death aglow
cold as bone.
