It must have been a dream
That vanished from that day
Perfectly serene
How dare we lose that day

There's no way
To save his face again

How long can he stray
Single out in space
I wonder if she'll stay
Or burn his remains

There's no way
To save his face again
And since that day
It's gone away

There's just no way
To save his face again

His wrists are blue and green
And now we know to slap his face
There's bruises on my knees
But I didn't know that I couldn't pray

There's no way
To save his face again
I guess I'll just say
No
Not again
