Slowly we peel away the layers and the light seeps
through the cracks.
You whispered softly in my ear the birth of morning's upon us, dear.
The bandages fell upon the floor.
And there was no one in that room.
It's quiet down the hallway where the doctors wash their hands.

Behind my eyes I feel the hollow jabs of your morphine kiss.
Your anesthetic voice is autographed upon my bones.
This reception died in vein.
This reception died in vein.
In vein.

This reception died in vein.
This reception died in vein.
This reception died in vein.
Died in vein.

A tarnished angel leaves her ghost on the surface.
A jealous daughter starves to death for the mother.

As I awaited your return.
As I awaited your return.

I wait for your return.
It seems the only way that I will ever feel alive.
Throw myself into my injuries and close my eyes.
I'd give anything to feel alive.

And I will wait for you tonight.
And I will wait for you tonight.

And I will wait for you tonight.
And I will wait for...
The scalpel carves a map for you.
A map for you.
A map for you.
A map for you.

This reception died in vein.
In vvin.
Died in vein.
Died in vein.
Died in vein.

This reception died in vein.
This reception died...

And I will wait for you...
And I will wait for you...
