To find out now that
You were never the sort to say I do
I found my love but who found you?

I was lovely that's what the others said
When all that time I felt scared
In denial I was lost

Not knowing my character
It's value more than just the cost

Winters shivered
And hot summers heated

Still my heart it never pleaded guilty
I may have been juvenile I know

But the warmth from your scars
Kept me sane under the snow

As seasons went by
Your memory had past

Now that I'm happy
My sad times have long gone

I sit back and think
Was my soul a burden?
And my bones too heavy to hold

Your cold desires played hide and seek Teasing away my senses like a freak

I'm no longer in your thoughts
I'm glad, I'm glad
I caught you early

I found my love but who found you?

Do you look up to skies and the places that surround you?

For I was never in you
And never to be hung around you

Like a distant star I will fade
Sitting in the quilt you have layed

I found my love but who found you?
