(Sky Saxon)

Where is the entranceway to play
Well, I've been trying hard all day
Well, all I want is some love from you
To have some fun making love to you
But they keep you locked away
Like pheasant under glass, you're wilting away
Where is the entranceway to play
Where is the entranceway to play
YOur father sits watches stocks
YOur mother has tea with society
You started your lesson at half-past three
The sun has gone, so has all your fun
What did they put in your head today
What kind of games do they make you play
Where is the entranceway to play
Where is the entranceway to play
Has life played a game on you
A silver spoon and your blood runs blue
Your auntie goes with a seventeen year old While your mother and your brother dry their hair with one another
Where is the entranceway to play
Where is the entranceway to play
My, my, my, oh my
Where is the entranceway to play
Where is the entranceway to play
Sitting in a parlor, in a straight-back chair
YOur mother slowly starts to descend the stairs
The butler ushers me out the door
YOur mother told him said to wait outside
Where is the entranceway to play
Where is the entranceway to play
Play, play, play, play, play
Play, play, play, play, play
