how many times, swan
we got cold
you uncorked your wine
how far we drove drunk
on a car of paper charms light drawing sun cartoons sunday fairs and red ballons how far we seemed to fly calling life a sugar spoon pain was a bird to fight sending feathered sticky kites through the night

spring saw us leaving thinking to slide down a moony river but reaching just a cardboard sea the promised wonderland

cross the drums
battle sounds
soon we lost
our paper wings

knew the thirst
knew the pain
learned to walk

to the man
trying to stand
we composed
our best songs

iron shoes
tramped on us
mad fanfare
of dirty tunes

then we knew
taste of dust
learned to fight

shaking fists
we composed
our last songs

new every morning
our poems will turn with care like the sunflowers
cause we know the taste of time how far we drove swan from our fading paper town far from your sticky moons shiny kites and red balloons your nowhere wonderland ...
