Title : Say Anything

To the lover
I left on a queen-sized
Mattress warm, yet I am gone
Think me as evil,
Call me what you will
An asshole, selfish, bastard

Say something, anything
Show me how to begin to want to say anything to you

Don't be salty;
You tasted so sweet before
But oceans cried I can't ignore
So think me as evil,
Call me what you will
An asshole, selfish bastard

Say something, anything
Show me how to begin to want to say anything to you

You must understand,
This is not because of you my love
Everything changed;
You are not to blame
I just don't like all I have become Vulnerable in your shadow,
Weak and defenseless,
I feel so static
I need to get gone.

You must understand,
You must understand,
I leave not because of you it's just,
Everything changed;
you are not to blame
I just don't like what I have become

Can't you understand,

Can't you understand,
It's not about you?

Say something, anything
Show me how to begin to want to say anything to you.
Just say anything
Say anything
Say anything
