I heard the words you had said were
Lying on your deathbed
And I can't sympathize with what you're saying

You did wrong, you realize
You took the stars from his eyes
Left him growing up uneven

You been drinking, no surprise
And you dismissed all your alibis
Gave no thought or rhyme or reason

Where is your soul now?
Where is your soul now?
Where is your soul now?

And the wind it blows

Love comes - a silent sound
Those buried beneath the ground
Give and take a bitter kiss, deceiving
Clergy man behind church walls
Light comes through like a fireball
Give us a sermon to believe in

Where is your soul now?
Where is your soul now?
Where is your soul now?

And the wind it blows

Go to bed with dreams at night
The morning brings you in the light
Touch your own body just to feel skin
You been thinking about it all
Light comes through and burns us all
Ready now to begin

Where is your soul now?
Where is your soul now?
Where is your soul now?

And the wind, it blows
Wind it blows
