You're no stranger to distance
You've seen every hour of the night
Your head is full like a beacon
And I trust your sight

You have seen my every weakness
And you have felt my might
Oh how I wish and I wonder
I knew where you were tonight

And if I sound strange
It's just I'm trying to rearrange
Putting something back, back to right

And I know where you take your berries
I know they keep you somewhere straight
Never seen your hands tremble
You're not one to hesitate, no

Cause you know everything you're wantin'
And you will not deviate
'Cause you are extraordinary

Something new, in a common place
And if I sound strong
Just don't know where I belong
Something gone, that I cannot replace

The times when we were in full voice
Standing together, there was no other choice, no

And if I sound strained
It's just I'm tired and old and plain
But I'm dying to see you here again
And again
My eyes they turn to you
Staring wide open
For you to walk on through, yeah

And if I sound strong
Guess there's a place where I belong

And I'm dying to see you one more time
Just one more time, one more time

Cause you're no stranger to distance
You've seen every hour of the night
Your head is full like a beacon
And I trust your sight
Cause you are extraordinary to me

You're extraordinary to me!
