(begins with a scat, sounds like...)

Hey bow-wow-hey-ba-biddy-hey

What's down

What's down below the street

What's under the pavement that's under your feet

What's down, down, down below

Down below the street

Looking deep down, the first thing you see

Are the wires that bring electricity

The lights light up, the telephones ring

Because of the power all these wires bring

All those wires, all those pipes

Different sizes, different types

Bring you water, bring you heat

What's down below the street

What's deeper down, here take a good look

These pipes bring the gas that makes your oven cook

And what about the water that flows in your sink

Those other pipes bring you the water you drink

That's what's down below the street

Under the sidewalk that's under your feet

What's deeper down, deeper down, down below the street

In the winter you don't want chilly feet

So you need these big pipes to bring you heat

And for the water that goes down the drain every day

There are great big pipes that take the water away

All those wires, all those pipes

Different sizes, different types

Bring you water, bring you heat

Let's go down, down, down, down

If you're in a city where the subway goes

There's even deeper to go down and now you know

What's down, down, down below, down below the street

What's down below the street
What's under the pavement that's under your feet
That's what's down, down beloooooow,
Down below the street
