I look upon Your hill
Your broken body hanging still
Your blood drips down your face and brow
You brought me life through death
No greater Love than this

Surely He's borne our grief, carried our sorrow
Though we've gone astray
And it's by His stripes and wounds
We were healed on that glorious day

I look upon Your hill
Your broken body hanging still
Your blood drips down your face and brow
You brought me life through death
No greater Love than this

Surely He's borne our grief, carried our sorrow
Though we've gone astray
And it's by His stripes and wounds
We were healed on that glorious day

Oh Lord, You've worn Your crown
I've placed upon Your head
And oh Lord, I've pierced Your hands
Yet Your blood declares my innocence

Surely He's borne our grief, carried our sorrow
Though we've gone astray
And it's by His stripes and wounds
We were healed on that glorious day

Surely He's borne our grief, carried our sorrow
Though we've gone astray
And it's by His stripes and wounds
We were healed on that glorious day
