

Seventh Day Slumber "Chris's Letter"

Visit "Chris's Letter" on MotoLyrics.com

I said that one day I'd be something
Everyone would soon be proud of me
I'd sit and watch the day go by
And think of all the things I'd like to be

So many of my dreams have gone
And now I'm only left with emptiness
There's nothing that can make me better
Nothing that can take away this pain

And I wonder what you'd say if I were gone
Would you cry? Did you even notice something wrong?

I often wonder what's to live for
I just want this pain to go away
All I have are fading memories
Pieces of my broken yesterday

Every drop of blood meant something
Every ounce he shed was shed for me
Here I am, I'm waiting for you
Crying out, I've fallen to my knees

And I wonder what you'd say if I were gone
Would you cry? Did you even notice something wrong?

And I wonder what you'd say if I were gone
Would you cry? Did you even notice something wrong?

And I wonder what you'd say if I were gone
Would you cry? Did you even notice something wrong?

Visit Seventh Day Slumber page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.