morning began and your head popped out with your heart and your hands it's easy to see why you'd gladly shovel dirt for a fee but where in the world could a sad, sad, sadder tale be heard it's over your head to be good, why be content to be led now you walk all up and down your street your head hung down right to your feet so take the time to carve your name on a rocking chair with the grain and wait until the evening sees you there and though the morning went too soon you're headed through the afternoon so rack brains now see why you should care, miserable girl just the result of a miserable world you start to depend on your longing for the start of the end it's always the same now that life means nothing but hunger and pain you're passing away you have nothing but the start of decay i heard someone said you'd rather you were dead
