I enjoyed the time as the world was embracing us
The last few months were like paradise - that was Around us all the time
I spoke about us knowing each other more and more
Through the years

(My tears ran dry)
It took a second for diseases to change my world
To a world without oceans
That clear horizon's turned into a disappointing view
Into a world without oceans

Feeling alone, fixed to the only one I love
Deported in an ignorant way - still I was begging you
To stay
A chapter's ending without paragraphs or warnings or Forebodings

(It's passing by)
It took a second for diseases to change my world
To a world without oceans
That clear horizon's turned into a disappointing view
Into a world without oceans

This poor world's desiccated, screaming for water in Parching ache
Only she could quench the thirst, but she dispatched it
Without a gaze
Could it be that this world ran dry and I just didn't See it? Have I been blind?
So I'm trying to save my tears to refill the oceans
