(Verse 1)

I lie awake at night
All alone inside your bed
Images of you
Running wild in my head

Confusion takes me over
Abandon ship or die
Fight the battle in my mind
Close your eyes and let the sunrise

(chorus)

The sea is littered with hopes and dreams
Of captains pushing past extremes
But getting stuck in the smallest boat
Not big enough for their dreams to be kept afloat

(Verse 2)

Now the snow falls harder
Then it ever has before
The storms blurring your vision
Now you're further from the shore

You don't know where you're heading
The storm's already swirled
You can't find your way out
There's no clarity in this world

(chorus)

(Bridge)

As we lay upon the beach
The sand is in our hair
But the sea she still calls me
With the salt that's in the air

But I cannot make the trip
For my boat is much too small
So my worries take the voyage
And leave us one and all
