Ray Thomas)

The dawn crept into my room,

And stole my dream.

Now I'll never know,

Just what it means.

Or what could have been,

Yet still I try,

To lie,

But I'm seen,

Under moonshine, that's where I've been.

Under moonshine, I'm clearly seen.

Under moonshine, that's where I've been.

Under moonshine, I'm clearly seen.

Creator of dreams that melt with the sun, Melt with the sun.

I'll tell you the things that this man has done. This man has done.

He was a saint, a sinner, rolled in one, Rolled into one.

But I miss him now that he's gone. Now that he's gone,

I said, I sure miss him now that he's gone. Now that he's gone.

Sure I feel the pain,

Deep inside I pour like rain.

Remember when you smile,

Love's in your eyes.

The world keeps turning, the grass still grows green.
Grass still grows green.

The fruit on my tree, is the biggest you've seen.
Biggest you've seen.

But which way is up, you know when you're down. Know when you're down.

You've gotta stand tall, with your feet on the ground.
Feet on the ground.

You must stand tall, with your feet on the ground. Feet on the ground.

Or maybe I'm crazy, The dawn,

And also they say, Crept into my room and

I'm lazy. Stole my dream.

But I'll have my days, Now I'll never know,

When I do as I please. Just what it means.

For you won't see the woods, Under

While you're a tree. Moonshine.

No you'll never see the woods, Under

While you're a tree. Moonshine.

Yes I'm crazy, The dawn,

And also they say, Crept into my room and

I'm lazy. Stole my dream.

But then I have my days, Now I'll never know,

When I do as I please. Just what it means.

You'll never see the woods, Under

While you're a tree. Moonshine.

No you'll never see the woods, Under

While you're a tree. Moonshine.
