Caroline Hecht - Trouble

Never before and never again would I recommend falling like a dizzy child into your arms to her disillusioned alarm
It was just like a bottle of wine that has oops slipped my mind and now I'm swimming spinning swimming in delirium not remembering where it came from
And now we're talking together quietly trying not to believe that the difference lies in the shape of our memory that together we could cause some real trouble
oh yeah we already have but the two of us together we could make that trouble double You can ask me but I might not say you can tell me and I'll probably sway oh 'cause your rhythm and your beat it's like a massage to my feet It is afternoon and I am waiting around for the echo heartbeat the sound to elapse from the cradle and go out the door
And now we're talking together quietly trying not to
believe that the difference lies in the shape of our
we could make that trouble double The illusion of what said and done haunts me like a loaded gun and I feel scared that it was real Time and space can replace what it is we wanted to contemplate but all there was was you and all there was was you and you and you and you and you and you
