

Carrie Fletcher

"When We Were Young"

Visit "When We Were Young" on MotoLyrics.com

I know a place where nobody knows your name
I know a place where you could drink the blame (?)
A place where dreams come true in December
All you have to do is remember days when we were young
The songs were left un-sung

I know in this place we could pretend
To sit on clouds and skies would never end
I guess you don't remember the days
When summers dawn and winters would fade
When no one could be wrong
Just listen to this song

I remember when we would climb the tallest mountain
When it was really just a hint
Do you remember how that feels
When your father would pick you up
And scare you and fly you through the air
Those cold nights in December
I guess you don't remember

Now the years have passed those days are gone
We've grown up fast and everything seems wrong
The simple days has gone with the years
What's left now? Heartbreak and tears
I'll take you back in time
To that place I still call mine

Remember we used to live in castles
Singing nursery-rhymes
Word for word, line for line
Remember I'd sit and tell you stories
Of knights and dragons sitting by the embers
I guess you don't remember

I wish you could remember

