From up north there are songs that have been sung by the largest loudest lungs you can find them all in the glamorous glowing

And from up north when I heard your towing song I knew you wouldn't be towing long you won't have to not where you are going

And from up north when I heard your towing song
I knew your shell would all be gone you won't need it here not where you are going

And you don't have to sing a last song
But we can all just play along
And hum with bright works and baton
Yes you will find them all in the glamorous glowing

And all our imprints are chalky bones
And all that we built we'd lay at the thrown If in our travels we could find our way home
We are searching
We are searching

From up north there are songs that have been sung by the largest loudest lungs you can find them all in the glamorous glowing

And from up north when I heard your towing song I knew you wouldn't be towing long you won't have to not where you are going

And you don't have to sing a last song
But we can all just play along
And hum with bright works and baton
