I've counted every single raisin
In my cereal bowl
And every divot in the ceiling
How many half-slices of toast
Will make how many whole
And how do I escape this feeling
Some say that I can be just as hard as a rock
But I can be, oh, so much bolder
I look you in the eye
And I'll take you by surprise
And I'll eat that chip off my shoulder
I'm so bored I could cry
I'm so happy I could die
Do I really want to learn to fly
[chorus]
Feel like android, livin' in a polaroid
Just another reject that gets a little seasick
Whose life am I in
Feels like deja-vu
Don't know how or what to do
Or point my finger to the sky
Finally ask the question why
Whose life am I in
Whose life am I in
Now the answer to this story
Is there really isn't one
Cause life is postively indecisive
And it takes a lot of work, havin' this much fun
Siftin' through this beautiful crisis
I'm so bored I could cry
I'm so happy I could die
Do I really want to learn to fly
[chorus]
Whose life am I in
I'm so bored I could cry
I'm so happy I could die
Do I really want to learn to fly
Feel like android livin' in a polaroid
Just another reject that gets a little seasick
Whose life am I in
Feels like deja-vu

Don't know how or what to do
Or point my finger to the sky
Finally ask the question why
Whose life am I in
Could this be my twist of fate
A dollar short, a little late
Could this all be just a dream
Or something more than in between
Rebound, unwound back in the playground
All night, never right, let's go fly a kite
Whose life am I in
And it takes a lot of work, havin' this much fun
And how do I escape this feeling
