Please don't touch me, I've come to far to let you bring me down
He's thinks that I'm easy but try as you might you can't have me now These tedious dances we run through but I've memorized them now
I quietly melt down and consent to you if only just to bawl

As I stare through you and I stand quite still
And a alarm sounds just up the road
I can tell you'd like some company but I can't fix you and you don't want me

I call for the witness, present the facts right down to the little things
They say the heart is resilient, in black and white you swore there'd be no strings
I sneak out the back door, but the gavel strikes
And I can hear you cry, and the sound of my footsteps
This time they will be no long goodbye

As I stare through you and I stand quite still
And a alarm sounds just up the road
I can tell you'd like some sympathy but I can't fix you
and you don't want me

How can I trust you? How could you need me now?
Its getting to be so cold,
The decision is in that I won't break
You can't even run with our lives at stake Well, someone must get hurt and it won't be me
The decision is in there will be no fight
It might sound cold but I know it's right Cause someone must get hurt and it won't be me
