She doesn't miss much.
She never stays too long.
She'll read you like the morning paper.
Everybody loves her.
Attentions like a drug.

Should you run across her,
Erase the ideas of
'A moment's all you'll get.'
Or maybe not that.

And if you kiss her, remember it's not love.
Or tell yourself one time til you remember that.

I didn't tell you, because it's not right.
Of how I will always long for you,
I will always wonder what it's like.
If not, I'll put my love to sleep.

We've done a bad thing,
We mustn't tell a soul.
The lines have all been crossed, until they all blur.
Wrestle with your conscience,
At least pretend for her.

If it's really such a bad thing,
Then why's it feel so right.
You know it's so much more than
"We're not supposed to."

Pull your body closer.
Let's kiss, and say goodnight.
But in the morning I'm still gonna want you.

I didn't tell you, because it's not right.
Of how I will always long for you,
I will always wonder what it's like.
If not, I'll put my love to sleep.

I didn't tell you, because it's not right.
Of how I will always long for you,
I will always wonder what it's like.

And then I'll put my love to sleep.

I didn't tell you, because it's not right.
Of how I will always long for you,
I will always wonder what it's like.
If not, I'll put my love to sleep.

I didn't tell you, because it's not right.
Of how I will always long for you,
I will always wonder what it's like.
And then I'll put my love to sleep
