on your own today
lost with no direction
they took your dreams away and stripped you of protection but there's a light that won't burn out when your heart is screaming out is screaming

it doesn't matter where you are there is life behind the walls around you it doesn't matter where you start won't be long, won't be long until the walls around you are gone on my own again with open invitations and the world i'm in is such a new sensation

but there's a light that won't burn out if your heart begins to doubt

it doesn't matter where you are there is life behind that walls around you it doesn't matter where you start it won't be long, won't be long until

maybe a path to glory it maybe a road to dust it maybe there's one great story in all of us in all of us, yeah

lost with no direction
they took your dreams away
and stripped you of protection
is screaming

it doesn't matter where you are

(cos when the walls are closing in)
(another day begins)
(as the last flame flickers out)
cos there's something good in us (cos when the walls are closing in)
(another day begins)
(as the last flame flickers out)
(cos when the walls are closing in)
(another day begins)
there must be something beautiful in us
cos there's something good in us (cos when the walls are closing in)
(another day begins)
