"Missing Existence"

My boyfriend stole my mascara, and the dog ran away with the microphone
I woke up today on the ceiling, since this gravity left me alone
They say my brain is due back tomorrow, and my dreams are deep in the sea There's some spare ones that I could borrow, even though they don't belong to me

A missing existence, in need of assistance Drowning in weird worlds, can somebody save me from this
Missing existence, step from resistance
How many words can make her believe this is true?

There's a graveyard under my basement, and a spaceship in my best friend's yard The weatherman fell out of the TV, when I started messing with his cue-cards

A missing existence, in need of assistance
Drowning in weird worlds, can somebody save me from
Missing existence, step from resistance
How many words can make her believe this is true?

Ohh, ohh, ohh, ohh, OHH When the staircase walked through the windows, the carpet talked to my feet
The school bus under my pillow, said that somebody's been watching me

A missing existence, in need of assistance
Drowning in weird worlds, can somebody save me from
Missing existence, step from resistance
How many words can make her believe this is true?
