(Chelonis R. Jones/Arno Kammermeier/Walter Merziger)

I never thought I'd get to this point in my life.
Emotions wrung like a towel, vows mangled and knifed.
It's not the point that you're leaving or that you've found somebody new.
It's when I asked if our love was gone.
You stuttered with a glare, saying.

I don't know? I don't know if love will somehow return.
I don't know? If you walk out the door, the passion
would burn.

And as the train plowed through the rain
You fell to your knees and you cried
But you were the one with a change of heart.
Didn't matter how hard I tried.
I would've died for this love, now I got to be strong.
It killed me when you said you felt right but you could be wrong.

I don't know if love will somehow return.
If you walk out the door, the passion would burn.
I don't know if love will somehow return.
If you walk out the door, the passion would burn.
I never ever thought, I never ever thought, I never ever thought
The passion would burn, emotions wrung like a towel.

(Synth solo)

I don't know? I don't know if love will somehow return.
I don't know? If you walk out the door, the passion
would burn.
I don't know? I don't know?
If you walk out the door, the passion would burn.
