you're a slow-acting potion you draw me in like a tide you cloud my mind like a fever you strip away my pride your voice calls to me from corners where you hide my world is burning badly borne on your breeze my head is pounding madly from your sweet disease i tumble towards the rocks and you control the seas sweet siren gas chamber such a love is this so poison

so lovely kill a thousand with a kiss make it go away
make it go away

i have no expectations of how this dream will be i can't tell the nature of the things i'll see you're the phantom beacon beckoning to me
she goes in circles come in threes she coils and hisses at my knees she's got me walking spanish and speaking japanese

make it go away
