This is a call for all the wasted days,
And things I forgot to say;
Like you bring me down.
I'll drag myself along, but I won't pray,
Because that's not what I believe.
Oh, won't you stick around.
Well, the line was drawn, won't you find someone
That makes you feel like you're the one
Who turns me on, even when you're not around,
And puts my feet right back on the ground.
We'll fly together and jump to the second stone.
Oh, and she brings me to life, knowing what's inside.
Surprise, surprise, I'm ready to come back home.
So, I'm leaving alone.
What's this, but a story to lead you on?
Of all the things we know, what's left to come?
Is this your way?
In my mind, I think I've been grinning since the day you said
"I don't need you and all your lies,
Though my heart says otherwise."
Well, the line was drawn, won't you find someone
That makes you feel like you're the one
Who turns me on, even when you're not around,
And puts my feet right back on the ground.
We'll fly together and jump to the second stone.
Oh, and she brings me too life, knowing what's inside.
Surprise, surprise, I'm ready to come back home.
So, I'm leaving alone.
Lately weeks are going by so slow,
But the summer's coming at you just to let you know.
This is a call for all the wasted days,
And things I forgot to say; like you bring me down.
You know I want you to turn me on even when you're not around,
And put my feet right back on the ground.
We'll fly together and jump to the second stone.
Oh, and she brings me too life, knowing what's inside.
Surprise, surprise, I'm ready to come back home.
So, I'm leaving alone.
