Coffee taste and long bus waits
The softest telling eye
You run and run, you don't know where from
You don't even know the why
Never knew I needed you
Till you kissed me slow and long
In a blazing late September
When the sun was slipping down

Like a sweet sweet sweet breath on a lonesome flame
A sweet sweet sweet breath on a lonesome flame.

In ancient rain we crossed the green
Heading out to find
Roads that know no turning back
Just long, one-way goodbyes
Never knew the sweetest truth
Till you loved me in the night
Of a Western-sky December
With the sun in solstice-time

Like a sweet sweet sweet breath on a lonesome flame
A sweet sweet sweet breath on a lonesome flame.

Baby I loved you best, I loved you most
I loved you right and wrong
You try and try, you turn an eye
You don't see what you don't want
Never saw the closing draw
Till that February morning
Empty space some better place
The road awake while the sun was sleeping on

Like a sweet sweet sweet breath on a lonesome flame
A sweet sweet sweet breath on a lonesome flame
You blew my way, you blew my way
Till you lit me up again,
