(You keep running around the park
You keep running around the park
You keep running around the park
You keep running around.)

You keep running around the park
You keep running around the park
Everyday you're thinner still
Everyday you're thinner still
But while you're running around the park, worrying about the size of your arse
I'm standing right here, and the dinner's on I'm a modern man, but this can not go on

You're running, You're running
You keep running around the park
You keep running around the park
You keep running around
I said you're running, you're running
You keep running around the park

You keep running around the park my love
You keep running as though there's something wrong
Why won't you talk to me any longer?
And while you're running around like some tight panted clown
Hey it's just one day, it's one white dress
If it split at the seams, I wouldn't love you less

You're running, You're running
You keep running around the park
You keep running around
I said you're running, you're running
You keep running around the park
You keep...

Remember when we met?
Eyes across a crowded room
My heart beat went
Mad for you
It was the first time we two kissed

It was the first time, and now you're always running

You're running

You keep running around the park

You keep running around

When are you coming home?
