"The Deal"

Ran through the field that I'd once known
Read the books, traveled alone
But I can't say that I was by myself
You were always with me, we had no one else

And if I had my way I might just go alone
And if we can't agree, I'll take my things and go
I realized you helped along the way
But do I owe you everything I earned my way?

We will always say goodnight
We will always say what's right
We can never say goodbye

Here's to the time spent on the road
And here's to the girls they'd come and go
Here's for the time I lost your keys
And for all the times you brought me to my knees

Let's talk along the way, who's given in?
We'll make it through this, and yet be friends
There's something about this thing that we've lost sight
How we all did get along, I think we might
