

Classic Crime, The "Sing"

We sing the same song, you and I

With lead feet in deep water, we cry out to live or die

Instead we tread in waves to stay alive

Our heads above the grave but there's no one to save us this time

So I will sing and you will hear me

And join the chorus so we can start again, oh

Our voices raised are flawed but freeing

Our souls so we can change and start again, oh

My life's a painting I've done blind

With each brush stroke you'll watch me blur every solid line

Over this canvas I have stood with no one left beside me

No one to decide if it's good

So I will sing and you will hear me

And join the chorus so we can start again, oh

Our voices raised are flawed but freeing

Our souls so we can change and start again

Again, again, again, again, again, yeah

I will sing and you will hear me

And join the chorus so we can start again, oh

Our voices raised are flawed but freeing

Again, again, again, again, again, again
