Times of laughter, times of anger
So precious was our time together, my heart ached

Ran away from home, not a word to our parents, first time living together No money no mattresses, we cuddled up close

Talked until dawn, not wanting to waste time sleeping

Overcame the lonely nights and the freezing cold
By pressing into each other's bodies
Such sweetness always by my side Your smile always managed to erase any sadness

My first birthday since we started our life together
Both so busy, had to spend the day apart

Came back home to find an expensive wallet when you had no money

Tears fell unexpectedly Waited for you to come home so I could say
"thank you"
My cup overflowing with tenderness Warmth, pulling at my heart Listening to the footsteps walking down the hall of the apartment
I waited with anticipation Hearing the sound of the keys opening the front door
I rushed to greet you

Time to leave this place, leaving only happy memories behind

Times of laughter and times of anger

So precious was our time together, my heart
ached
Eternal love never sanctified
If only I could have stopped this fleeting time Our last day at the apartment, on the walls doused with happiness
Our names
We wrote softly, deep in thought
With a stroke of a pen
