Let me show you heaven,
It's hiding between your legs.
Let me show you heaven,
Just come home with me instead.
Let me show you heaven,
You're running around my head.

You're running around my head.

(You) Mean so much to me.
Mean so much to me.
Mean so much to me.
Mean so much to me.

Absence makes the heart grow fonder, hold a little longer.
So my mind can process the taste of you.
Make the bonds a little stronger, finding hope in honour.
Is something that I have gotten used to.

I see the way you flick your hair, you're up for, are you up for this?
Your elegance, this inner flare, has got me wallowing in innocence.

In the dark, I can still see your eyes.
(Catching clarity from moonlight.)
And in a place where all purity dies,
Can we give this a try tonight?

Let me show you heaven,
It's hiding between your legs.
Let me show you heaven,
Just come home with me instead.
Let me show you heaven,
You're running around my head.

You're running around my head.

(You) Mean so much to me.

Tell me patience is a virtue,
Someday I'll be worth you,
But until then I will hold onto fate.
And knowing there is no curfew,
For justice to pull through's
Got me wondering whether this is worth the wait.

I see the way you stop and stare, you're over, you're not over it.
Painting suspense in my despair is something that I just cannot permit.

Let me show you heaven,
It's hiding between your legs.
Let me show you heaven,
Just come home with me instead.
Let me show you heaven,
You're running around my head.

Maybe, baby, you could always hate me if you tried.
But baby, lately I've been going crazy skipping nights.

Cause I can see the stars from my bedside window.
I can see the stars, can you see them too?
I can see the stars and they make me think of you.

You're up for, are you up for this?

Let me show you heaven,
It's hiding between your legs.
Let me show you heaven,
Just come home with me instead.
Let me show you heaven,
You're running around my head.

You mean so much to me.
