(Sandra Rhodes)

The summer sun doesn't shine as bright as it used to shine
But its warming rays make me love the days while you're still mine
The last sweet moments of summer aren't quite over yet
But what bothers me is I hate to see that summer sunset.

'Cause when autumn leaves start turning brown
And the grass begins to die I'll look for your love but it won't be found
'Cause September means goodbye.

So I'll hold you close while the summer sun's still shining down
And make memories for those lonely days when you're not around I'll have lots to think of and your sweet love I'll never forget
Though it has to be still I hate to see that summer
sunset.

(Summer sunset)
sunset.
(Summer sunset)
sunset...
